

Sunrise waltz

As the night is coming on, dreams growing strong, I'll be gone for a long, long time

Loves all faces, places and feelings, dealings of life and death
I know the remorse of dying, the joy of flying, I am crying silently
But the break of day that is coming my way I wake up as the sun brightens the room where I lay

But the same tears I cried in my sleep still moisten my cheek Thoughts finding tracks they linger on to where facts is what I want them to be

Things, creatures, moving features of people I've known or will know Exclamations, revelations of tunes in combinations with words creating this song
But then the sun thrust it's light, in to the night and I wake up, as the dusky dawn soon will turn into day

But the same melody that came to me rings on
As I close my eyelids I open my eyes to the core in me that's good, that is sore
To understand who I am and what I will be I have to close my eyes to be able to see

That from my body flowers will grow, I will be in them and that's eternity
And in this infinity wishes' will turn out to be and all that I dream and can imaging to be.

Is just as real as the things that I touch and I see
