

Jessi

Hey girl it hurts me so to see you in such pain
I wish for something I could do, or just find the right word to say
But you know I'm not that good at talking no I don't speak that soothing tongue
So I will give to you my message in tune ill try to Wright you a song

Remember to look at the leaves on the trees don't forget about the green green grass
Though the fall is cold and gray and the sun has gone away it's the loveliest time of the year
Summers bloom has started to fade on this bittersweet September day
If you're to scared to fall then you won't move at all that's a simple old fact I recall

I see your smile but the tears right behind when you say Hannes I'm alright
And here I stand like a child ones again not knowing what to do
You know I know nothing about dying but I don't want to see you so sad
So remember the thought that everything that you got will as sure as the dawn go away

Remember to look on the leaves on the trees don't forget about the green green grass
Though the fall is cold and gray and the sun has gone away it's the loveliest time of the year
Summers bloom has started to fade on this bittersweet September day
Stop looking down take your gaze of the ground look up see them leaves still around